Subject: RE: Bodies Revealed Russia

Hello everyone,

This is Tom Zaller from Premier Exhibitions Inc, the Producers and owners of Bodies the Exhibition in Atlanta, GA.

Premier has decided to retain our DC based Law firm Venable to lead the charge in Russia. Peter Belk will be leading the team, his contact information is below. When Peter reaches out to you, please assist him with the information that you have gathered up to this point and your fullest cooperation so we can continue to move forward as swiftly as possible.

Premier very much appreciates the approach that has been taken so far and all of the effort from all the parties involved. I hope that we can all have this issue resolved soon.

William

We are going to clarify your issues tomorrow since in my opinion customs permissions in this case may be non objective or no based on russian legislative

I am going to contact with North west customs administrtrtion witch coordinate this case

And we hope monitoring the issue at the local, regional and levels helps us to provide you by needed info

Tomorrow

timing would be 2 m (as maximum term on warehouse)

With warm redards

Alexey:

Thanks you for your e-mail. Three questions:

1. Are you saying that in order to leave the country, we need the same sort of paperwork that we would need to stay?
2. Is it the exact same paperwork/approval to stay or leave? In other words, if we are applying to leave, if, by the time the approval actually came through, would we be able to stay instead, using the same approval?
3. Do you have any idea what the timing might be?

Bill:

Further to my telephone conversation with Tatiana Samokhvalova of One-Go Events Russia, we spoke with the local customs officials involved in this issue. Our understanding is as follows.

Due to certain incompliance in the paperwork, Russian customs authorities rejected the ATA-Carnet for temporary admission. As a result, three containers with exhibits got stuck in St. Petersburg customs. Usually in such a case, the goods can be moved either in or out in accordance with the normal (not simplified) customs procedures. However, owing to the recent tightening of controls with respect to the import/export of all bio-materials, and due to the absence of clear rules, especially for these unusual "materials", the local customs authorities did not want to assume the responsibility for releasing the goods and raised the issue to the Federal level.

12/7/2007

Together with my colleague Wilhelmina Shavshina, who leads our customs practice in St. Petersburg, we would be glad to offer our help in monitoring the issue at both the local and federal levels and speed up the decision using our contacts. We have some ideas on how to deal with this. At the initial stage we will be happy to offer our services based on our usual hourly rates and will approximate a fee budget on a later stage of the project.

Also, we currently presume that the same authorization will be required for either temporary import or for the re-export of the exhibits; therefore it is the client's business decision whether to let the exhibits remain or to remove the bodies from Russia.

Should you have any questions, please contact me.

With best regards,

Alex.

Alexey:

Please see below. Apparently, the bodies made their way in, but the paperwork was faulty. The bodies are being held at the Pan-Belt Customs Brokerage House in St. Petersburg. Rather than trying to get the bodies to stay in, we want to abort for now and remove the bodies from Russia.

Please expect contact from Paul Koster, Jam's Russian partner, with additional background information. Please let me know how I can help.

Thanks.

Subject: RE: Importation of Bodies into Russia

William,

We will try to help. As Constantine mentioned in his e-mail below, import/export of biological materials has recently become a headache even for medical and scientific institutions, therefore we expect difficulties with this issue.

Prior to offer our help to the client I need to talk (if possible) to Russian partner of Jam Exhibitions in order to clarify what documents do they have, and what did they actually submitted to Russian Health Ministry.

I would appreciate if you check with the client and send me the contract details, if possible.

Have a nice day,
